An Eight Part Lecture Series

Public policy that has threatened the lives of people with physical and mental impairments and other devalued people is not a new, or even a modern concept. However, the legitimizing of methods and policies that result in the deaths of people in today's world is unprecedented. Life-Threatening Public Policy is an eight part lecture series designed to explore contemporary examples of deathmaking through public policy, to describe them as a pattern contributing to the vulnerability of people with impairments, and to call participants to careful reflection and to positive action. This is a course designed for anyone interested in defending the lives of people with impairments, especially for those willing to consider that ours is a society which is prepared to do away with those it devalues.

The participant in this series will be invited to:

- Appreciate the vulnerability of impaired and devalued people to having their lives abbreviated.
- Consider the connections among all forms of life-threatening public policy.
- Consider examples of means to oppose life-threatening public policies.

Topics

- #1 A Lesson From History: The German Euthanasia Program and Its Echoes in Our Own Day
- #2 Social Devaluation and the Killing Thought: Common Life Experiences of Human Service Recipients and How This Contributes to Their Deaths
